

FASHION / ECOSALON HOME

Form and Function for Your Summer Getaway

Jun 20, 2008 at 9:50 am by Allison McCarthy

I'm all about product functionality, but if something doesn't also look good, then forget it. I love designers who understand what it means to create an extremely stylish product without forsaking purpose, which is why I was drawn to Malcolm Fontier's collection. I'm quite picky about working details, so I was impressed when this line passed my test.

Since Malcolm's toiletry cases survived my intense checklist, you can be sure you're set for all of your upcoming summer getaways. 100% vegan-friendly, these cases sport a large compartment lined with plastic to keep liquids safely tucked away to prevent spilling. They also have a pull out pocket insert, which can be unsnapped for taking a few necessities for a night out. This team really did think of everything.

Note: If you like these toiletry cases, check out the brand's line of sleek wallets.

Categories: vegetarian, travel, personal care, fashion, accessory

RSS: 17,586

From the Mountains of Peru to You

Peruvian designer Giuliana Testino's stunningly structured,

5 Decor Trends That Go Too Far

Your editor has had enough. First, a recap: On the green path to

PMSing? Put Away the Pills!

Listen up, ladies, I want you to back away from that Midol. Monthly

Eco-Friendly Business Cards: From Watermark to Watercress

Have you ever been jealous of a colleague's business card?

Looking for an Unusual Eco Vacation? Step into an Earthship

If you've ever considered vacationing in Taos, consider staying